If it takes a village to raise a child, then the same might be said about a website.

We owe our first and biggest thanks to God, for being the perfect Father, the perfect guide.

We also want to extend a big “Thanks!” and a warm hug to all the villagers who have helped make the dream of WaltzingTheDragon.ca into a reality:

Ward Clark, Joe Solowiejczyk and Lorraine Anderson for the initial “confidence building” meeting that encouraged us to embark on this endeavour.

Allison Husband, Lesley McCoy, and the rest of the team at the Alberta Children’s Hospital Diabetes Clinic - for your tireless review of the articles, and for sharing your experience and expertise in every step

Michael Watts for sharing your knowledge and experience by contributing articles to our Parenting section, and for joining this project with enthusiasm right from the start

Joe Solowiejczyk for sharing your inimitable wisdom and first-hand knowledge about wrestling with this dragon by contributing an article to our Coping section

Stephen Burns at Bennett Jones for sharing your time and knowledge to make sure our legal t’s are crossed and i’s dotted

Greg Turner at Strategic Tax & Business Solutions for sharing your time and expertise to make sure our finances are in order

Rick Baumgartner for allowing us to share your presentation with the rest of the world

Julide for a marathon brainstorming session that created our name, Waltzing the Dragon.

Susan S. for the brainstorming session that set our marketing ship on course

Sue L. for reviewing articles, for guiding our marketing plan, and for giving spot-on feedback on a multitude of topics

Lori for reviewing articles and for providing game-changer public relations tips

Michelle for sharing the experience and exceptional attention to detail that helped shape our school articles

Grant for being our graphic technician and IT consultant extraordinaire

Denise for proof reading, fastidious feedback and all-around support

Stephen for meeting our on-the-spot IT needs

Megan for all things graphic, and for being a key part of the WTD development team

Tyler for all things IT, and for being a key part of the WTD development team

Dean for being our on-demand graphic artist, and for getting “a little less — and a little more —” right on paper

Our moms for being our unwavering cheering squad

Our husbands, Steve and Dean, for supporting our dream and for backing us up in reality

Our sons, Paul and Max, who bravely face the diabetes dragon every day —
You make us proud.
